3b. Why do you hold this view? Please state

Wind is intermittent therefore for every installed MW there must be an equivalent MW available from another source. One large power station is a blot on the immediate landscape - windfarms are lots of blots all over the landscape - as are the pylons and power lines that are needed to take the power away from each individual windfarm.

What size of bond will Infinergy be laying down for decommissioning? What percentage of the cost of decommissioning will the bond represent? Will Infinergy be covering the cost for the local authority to relay all the public roads that are being used to transport windfarm parts? What level of subsidy (direct and indirect) will Infinergy be recovering from any and all sources per installed MW both up-front and over the life time of the windfarms? What price will Infinergy get per installed MW of electricity on the wholesale market (assuming today's prices)? What is the level of transmission loss from remote windfarms by the time the electricity reaches its market?
